

Appendix VIII.

REPORT REGARDING THE OPERATIONS UNDERTAKEN AT THE PADDINGTON CEMETERIES.

The reproach of having taken no care of the last resting place of many early pioneers who laid the foundations of the city of Brisbane, and whose sons and daughters have helped to open up the whole of sunny Queensland, has at length been removed; and the old Paddington Cemeteries, one time overgrown with lantana and other noxious weeds, littered with broken memorial stones and dilapidated fences, and serving as a harbour for the goats of the neighbourhood, who browsed therein at their pleasure, have now been transformed into a spacious park and children's playground, neatly fenced, in place of the scene of gloomy desolation which before existed.

These historic cemeteries, which consisted of seven distinct sections, were set apart prior to the separation of this State from New South Wales, an area being granted in trust to each of the following religious bodies:—Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Jewish, Wesleyan Methodist, Congregational, and Baptist, and from the early forties onward the areas served as the general cemeteries for the town of Brisbane for several decades, until in 1875, owing to the growth of population in the vicinity, the Paddington Cemeteries were closed, and the Brisbane General Cemetery at Toowong opened. At date of writing the actual number of deceased buried in the old cemeteries cannot be definitely stated, as diligent search has failed to locate the whereabouts of any old cemetery records; but a total of 4,643 apparent graves were located by the officers of the Lands Department during the recent operations, while doubtless all trace of many other mounds has been obliterated by the hand of time.

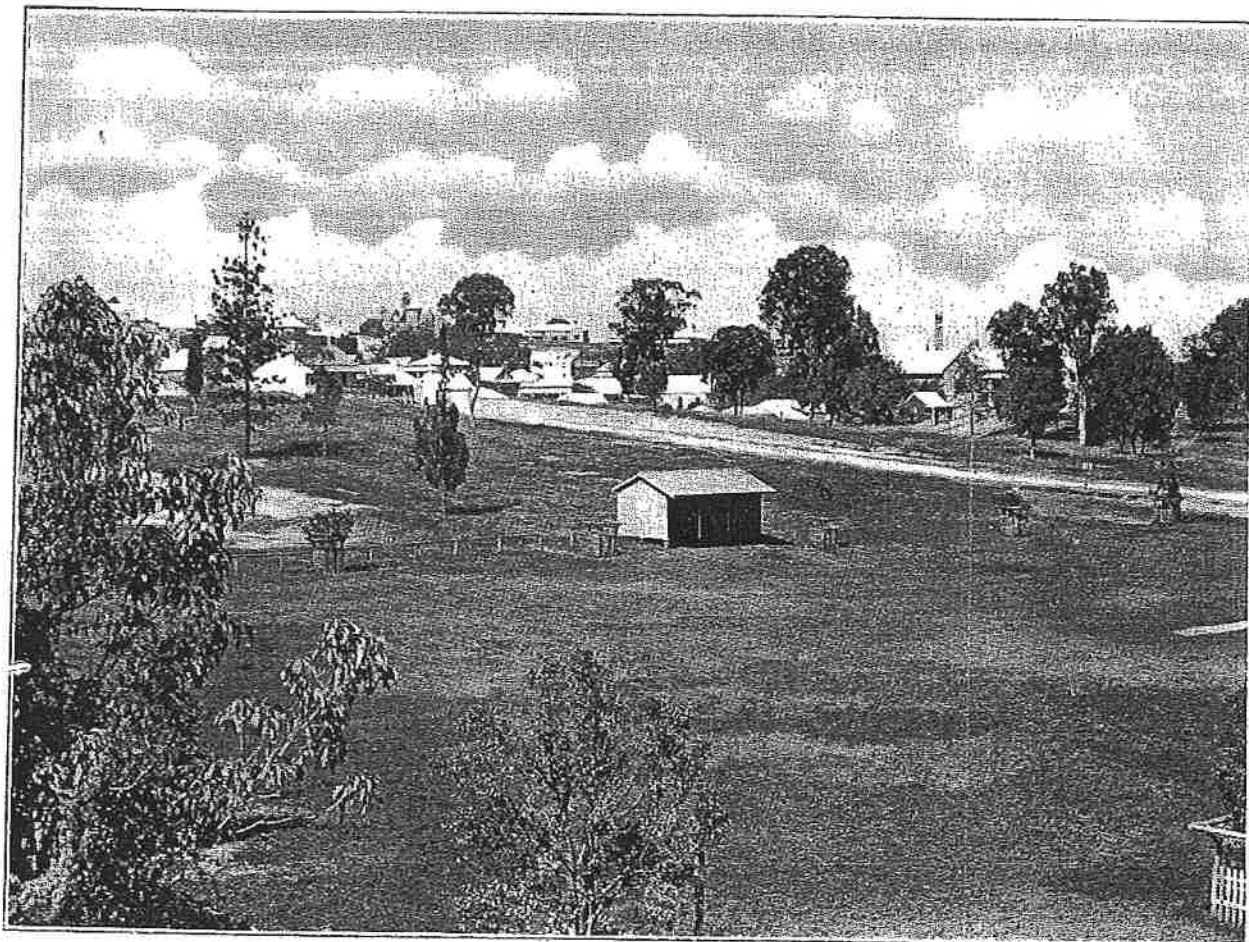

Subsequent to their closure the cemeteries fell into disrepair, and, though spasmodic efforts were made from time to time by the various denominations concerned to put them in order, they eventually became such an eyesore that in 1910 the late R. J. Cottell, M.L.A., then member for Toowong, headed a deputation to the Attorney-General with a request, which had the warmest support of the Hon. D. F. Denham, that, if possible, the several cemetery trusts might be terminated, the bodies disinterred and removed to other cemeteries, and the land reserved for public purposes. Subsequently a Bill was introduced by the late Minister for Lands, Mr. E. H. Macartney, and "The Paddington Cemeteries Act of 1911" passed through both Houses of Parliament.

authorising the Government to resume the several cemeteries and, upon the request within twelve months of any relative of any person buried therein, to disinter the remains of the deceased and remove the same, together with any memorials, to any cemetery agreed upon.

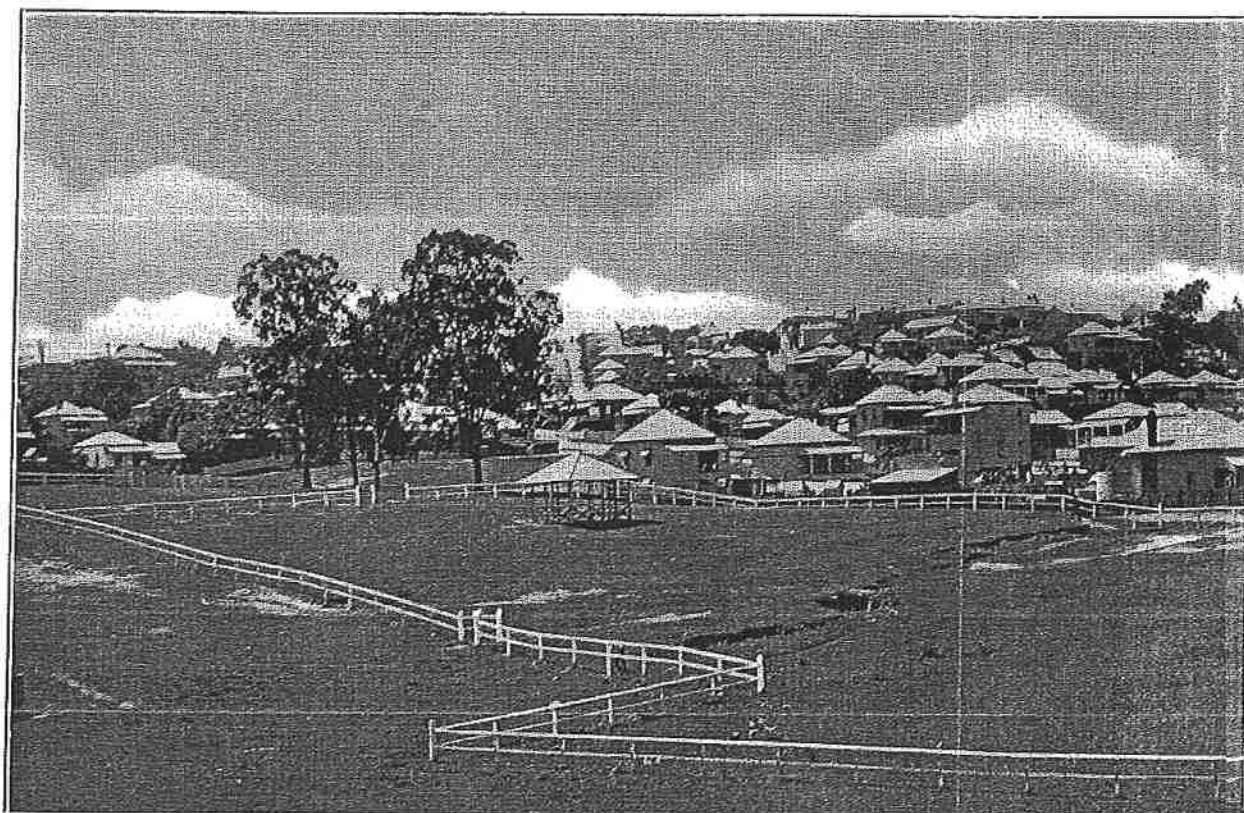

The advertisements which were circulated making known the provisions of the Act elicited inquiries and applications from relatives in near and remote parts of Queensland and from overseas as far as London and Edinburgh, the total reaching 178. Of these, 33 applications were for removal and reinterment of remains only, 110 for removal of remains and memorials, and 35 for removal and re-erection of memorials only. No action has been taken by the Department to disturb the remains of deceased persons in those cases in which relatives did not apply; but the memorial stones in such cases, numbering 505, have been collected and re-erected within an area adjoining the Church of England reserved under the Act. This reserved area, which is a strip at the south-eastern corner of the Episcopalian section, in area 1 rood 2 perches, has been enclosed by a neat fence, and is sufficiently large to hold all the unclaimed memorial stones placed in rows with the inscriptions facing outwards and arranged according to religious denominations.

The operations undertaken at the request of relatives of deceased persons embraced the removal of remains and memorials to the Brisbane General (Toowong), South Brisbane, Lutwyche, Nudgee, Nundah, Bald Hills, Lawnton, Grovely, Goodna, and Tingalpa Cemeteries. The entire cost of the removals undertaken was defrayed by the Department, and, except in those cases in which removal was desired to ground already held in the cemetery selected, a sufficient area was also purchased by the Crown for the reinterment of remains or the re-erection of memorials. Full particulars regarding these operations will be found in the Appendices.

The exhumations of remains in cases in which application was made, with the removal of memorials to the reserved area and the general levelling and clearing up of the cemeteries, required the employment of a special gang of men for a period of six months, in addition to which the removal of remains and memorials to other cemeteries and erection of the new boundary fences have been carried out by contract. The entire work has been supervised by the Public Estate Improvement Branch of the Department.

and has been carried to completion with an entire absence of unpleasant incidents, while in a great number of instances the relatives concerned have expressed their gratification at the conduct of the operations. Owing to the absence of records, it was not found possible to identify graves unless marked by memorials or pointed out by relatives; but a survey was undertaken and the position of graves determined in all cases in which any evidence leading to identification existed or could be supplied. The utility of this work was demonstrated in a case in which the memorials had been removed and a subsequent request was made for the removal of the remains, when the grave was again readily located by the bearings and distances taken. Considerable difficulty was found in carrying out the wishes of relatives in cases in which the grave was unmarked by any memorial, and its identification by the relatives concerned doubtful, so that on sinking in the spot selected no grave at all was found; while in other instances some characteristic—height of stature or article of jewellery—was suggested as a possible means of identification, but the position of the grave could not be even approximately indicated. One peculiar instance of identification which occurred was that of the remains of a young man who, it was stated, had died from the effects of having a tooth drawn, hæmorrhage having caused death, and the skull being in excellent preservation there was indeed evidence of a missing tooth. But, in the main, there was little evidence of remains to be seen, and very seldom anything identifiable. In dry soils it was found that the bones and the enclosing wooden casket had almost entirely disappeared, and in close proximity to trees nothing at all remained. Only in the damper ground were bones seen in better preservation; and in two cases only, in a peculiar streak of white clay, was the entire skeleton found. In many cases timber, clothes, and hair were found well preserved. In one instance the deceased had been fully clothed in a riding suit of some brown material, and in his waistcoat pocket was two pence. These remains had been buried sixty years, and, though the cloth was fairly well preserved, the remains had almost entirely disappeared.

Several memorials of early date were found of wood damaged in various degrees from decay and fire, a remarkably well-preserved one bearing the names of Robert and David Wing and the year 1848.

The earliest date found on a stone in these cemeteries is 1838—

William Davey,
Native of Birmingham,
Died Jan. 27th, 1838.

But there seem no connecting links between this date and 1844, which is distinguishable on several stones; and William Davey's stone may have been erected to his memory, not over his remains.

One of the latest memorials bearing the year 1875 is that of—"Thomas Haynes, who was coachman to Governor Cairns, by whom this record is made."

There are many other interesting inscriptions amongst those at Paddington. Several instances are noticeable of cases of sudden death on duty, amongst which may be mentioned:—

"Joseph Matthews, late carpenter's mate of ship 'Winifred,' who was accidentally killed by the slipping of a spar, 10th March, 1873."

"Theodosius Wm. Poulden, gunner No. 1 Battery Queensland, who was accidentally killed at a parade, Saturday, 13th October, 1870."

"John McIntosh, accidentally killed by falling from the fore top of the ship 'Everton,' 21st May, 1866."

An early tragedy of the Brisbane River is brought to mind by the memorial stone recording the death of—"Augusta, wife of Frederick John Robinson, F.R.G.S., who was drowned with four others by the capsizing of a yacht in the River Brisbane, 1863."

Graveyard humour and philosophy are proverbial, and Paddington is no exception. Quaintly saith one tombstone—

"This world is a city made up of crooked streets;
"The earth is a market place where all people meets.
"If life were but merchandise which money could but buy,
"All the rich would live and all the poor would die."

Peculiar interest was attached by one applicant to the memorial of his father's first wife, which he desired to have preserved, as, in the absence of other family records, it had one time served him in good stead in establishing his claim to certain lands.

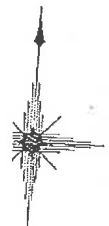

A link with the early days of Tasmania is supplied by the memorial of—"Edward Thomas Rice, of Van Dieman's Land, who died 31st January, 1853."

Many names well known in the early days of Brisbane and Queensland were found inscribed in these old cemeteries:—Richard Coley, first Sergeant at Arms, Queensland Legislative Council; Agatha K. Cockle, daughter of Sir James Cockle, the first Chief Justice of Queensland; Medora Ann Little, wife of Robert Little, first Crown Solicitor of Queensland; Ernest Elphinstone Dalrymple, sixth son of Sir Robert Dalrymple Horn Elphinstone, Bart.; John S. Ferriter, R.N.; Percival, son of P. Baskerville, R.N.; Wm. H. Geary, Commander R.N.; A. M. C. Patrick, Lieutenant Queensland Native Police; Captain H. E. Ellice, 19th Hussars; P. J. Paish, late 15 Queen's Own Regiment; Lieutenant John
