ANDREW PETRIE	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	13	5	1

Andrew Petrie (1798-1872), Explorer, builder and architect, was born in June 1798 in Fife, Scotland, son of Walter Petrie and Margaret, née Hutchinson, and trained in his craft in Edinburgh. He was one of the Scottish mechanics brought to Sydney in 1831 by John Dunmore Lang as the nucleus of a new force of free workers. Meeting much enmity from convict and emancipist workers, Petrie was glad to accept a post as clerk in the Ordnance Department.

WALTER HILL	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	6	21	9

Walter Hill (1819-1904), Explorer, horticulturist, was born on 31 December 1819, at Scotsdyke, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, one of twin sons and nine children of David Hill, tollsman, and his wife Elizabeth, née Beattie. When not yet 16, Walter was apprenticed to his brother David, then head gardener at Balloch Castle, Dumbarton, later working at Dickson's Nursery, Edinburgh, and as foreman at Minto House, Roxburghshire. He then accepted a position in the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh, under William McNab, on whose recommendation he went in 1843 to the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, London, where he subsequently became foreman of the propagation and new plant departments. On 16 September 1849 at Holy Trinity Church, Brompton, Middlesex, he married Jane Smith.

Sources
'BDM Queensland Index Search', The State of Queensland (Department of Justice and Attorney-General), 2015
Trove, Digitised Newspapers and More (2015)
heritage-register.ehp.qld.gov.au
adb.anu.edu.au/biography heritage-register.ehp.qld.gov.au/placeDetail.html?siteId=15039 www.parliament.qld.gov.au/apps/formermembers/memberBio1.aspx?m_id=162 www.queenslandplaces.com.au/
https://www.dnrm.qld.gov.au/mapping-data/maps/history/surveying/gregory
With Compass, Chain & Courage, Doris Gray-Woods, Boolarong Press, 2009
Governor Gipps 1839, Historical Records of Australia, vol. 20, p. 210
adb.anu.edu.au/biography/petrie-andrew-2548 http://www.teara.govt.nz/en/biographies/1h14/heaphy-charles https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/William_Landsborough www.textqueensland.com.au/item/article/25356db10fbcc462e3977250806f200f adb.anu.edu.au/biography/gregory-sir-augustus-charles-3663
adb.anu.edu.au/biography/warner-james-13236

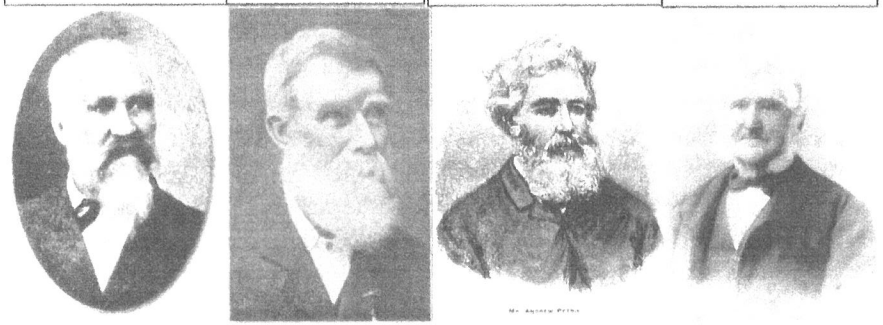

A Friends of Toowong Cemetery Association Inc Guided Heritage Walk

Explorers and Surveyors

HEAPHY	LANDSBOROUGH	PHILLIPS	GREGORY

WARNER	MELVILLE	PETRIE	HILL

© Friends of Toowong Cemetery Association Inc. Version 1, 1ST October 2017

Compiled and presented by Darcy Maddock

MAJOR CHARLES HEAPHY VC	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	1	5	34

(1820 – 3 August 1881) was an English-born New Zealand explorer and recipient of the Victoria Cross (VC), the highest military award for gallantry in the face of the enemy that can be awarded to British and Commonwealth forces. He was the first soldier of New Zealand's military to be awarded the VC. He was also a noted artist and executed several works of early colonial life in New Zealand.

WILLIAM LANDSBOROUGH	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	12	55	3

William Landsborough (1825-1886), explorer, was born on 21 February 1825 at Stevenston, near Saltcoats, Ayrshire, Scotland, son of Dr David Landsborough, clergyman, entomologist and artist, and his wife Margaret, née McLeish. Educated in Irvine, he migrated in 1841 to New South Wales

GEORGE PHILLIPS	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	11	51	2

He was an extraordinary man who was by turns an explorer, politician, surveyor and civil engineer. Phillips was born in England in 1843 and died on June 2, 1921 in Queensland; his family migrated to Australia when he was eight. He qualified as a surveyor and civil engineer, and accompanied William Landsborough in his expedition through the Diamantina country in 1866. With Landsborough he undertook further exploration of the Gulf country, and did much to open up that part of Queensland. In 1874 he joined the Railway Department and remained in its service until 1886 as surveyor and engineer. He entered the political arena and served as MLA for Carpentaria between 1893 and 1896. In later years he had a private practice as engineer and surveyor.

SIR AUGUSTUS CHARLES GREGORY KCMG	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	14	22	14

In 1858 explorer and surveyor, Sir Augustus led an expedition searching for traces of the missing explorer Ludwig Leichhardt. He was appointed Queensland's first Surveyor-General in December 1859. In 1882 he became a Member of the Legislative Council and served as Chairman of the first Toowong Municipal Council. The well-known explorer Gregory became the first President of the Toowong Shire Council in 1881. With his brother, Francis, Augustus was attached to the survey department of Western Australia and later joined the Survey Department in Queensland rising to the position of Surveyor General in 1859.

JAMES WARNER	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	13	68	18/19

James Warner was born in London on 12 March 1814, son of James Warner, a master mariner. Young James followed his father into the merchant navy. On reaching Sydney in the Persian on 25 August 1835, he resigned his commission. By 1837, he was a junior clerk, third class in the Surveyor-General's Department and became an assistant surveyor two years later. He was one of the first surveyors despatched to Moreton Bay in 1839 after its abandonment as a penal settlement and began carrying out surveys for the town of Brisbane and surrounding areas to facilitate free settlement. In 1850 Warner surveyed a new road between Brisbane and Ipswich bringing it past Moggill Village which he also surveyed. In January 1861 he produced, for sale, a large coloured map of Brisbane. After a brief illness, he died on 6 May 1891 at his then home, Runnymede, at Albion.

JOHN MELVILLE	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	9	10	14

John Melville, the first overseer, devoted most of his life to Toowong Cemetery. He was born in Boreham Wood Hertfordshire in 1834 and in 1848 came to Queensland with his parents under the guidance of Dr John Dunmore Lang aboard the Fortitude. In 1851 when the gold diggings broke out in Victoria, Melville went, to try his luck but returned to Brisbane at Christmas 1854 to visit his family. He then met Augustus Gregory and was asked to join his Great Northern exploration party for the purpose of exploring the Victoria and Albert Rivers, an invitation which he accepted. He was the last surviving member of this expedition. After returning from the expedition Melville was engaged in survey work until 1871 when he acted as chainman to George Phillips, who had been engaged to survey part of the present cemetery at Toowong and in 1873 he was appointed overseer of the cemetery by the Trustees which position he held for 38 years. He was succeeded in his position by his son J. L. Melville. The Melvilles lived in a house, later demolished, on part of the cemetery reserve where the bus depot is now. John died aged 77 on 8 of March 1912.