KAROLY 'CHARLES' PULSZKY	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	5	2	3

In 1884, Karoly Pulszky was appointed director of the National Picture Gallery in Budapest. He played a decisive role in the expansion of the Gallery in order to establish a Museum of Fine Arts and was commissioned by the Hungarian Minister for Culture at the time to travel to London and other European cities including Amsterdam and Vienna to attend art auctions to bid for paintings to add to the Gallery's collection. Pulszky's story is the subject of Thomas Shapcott's 1984 book, The White Stag of Exile.

ARTHUR HOEY DAVIS	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	29A	47	4

Arthur Hoey Davis, born at Drayton near Toowoomba in 1868, was one of Queensland's literary greats and arguably the best remembered and best loved of the Queensland writers of yesteryear. He adopted the pseudonym 'Steele Rudd'. In 1895 The Bulletin published his 'Starting the Selection', a short story based on his father's experience, in which Rudd introduces the characters in his legendary family, and sets the pattern for further adventures. Davis became a regular and popular contributor and in 1899 the Bulletin published an illustrated collection of the sketches in book form under the title On Our Selection. He lay in an unmarked grave after his death in 1935 until an appeal for public subscriptions by the Queensland Authors and Artists' Association resulted in the erection of a headstone in 1956.

Sources

www.familyhistory.bdm.qld.gov.au/, The State of Queensland (Department of Justice and Attorney-General), 2018

Trove, Digitised Newspapers and More (2016)

adb.anu.edu.au/biography/adams-francis-william-2865

www.poetrylibrary.edu.au/poets/adams-francis http://adb.anu.edu.au/biography/welsby-thomas-9044

The Australian 8 October 2010

espace.library.uq.edu.au/view/UQ:210190/s18378366_1948_4_1_27.pdf

www.forgottenbooks.com/readbook_text/Modern_Scottish_Poets_1000294391/289

womenssuffragepetitions.wordpress.com/2014/03/31/leading-lights-leontine-cooper/

www.hungarianreview.com/article/20150317_ferenc_pulszky

www.jstor.org/stable/23296440?seq=1#page_scan_tab_contents

www.akademiai.com/doi/abs/10.1556/MuvErt.61.2012.1.5

adb.anu.edu.au/biography/davis-arthur-hoey-5911 sites.google.com/a/ozlitguide.com/www/Home/ch-11-Steele-Rudd-Arthur-Hoey-Davis www.heritageaustralia.com.au/articles/features/4584-selected-memories-steele-rudd-and-a-bygone-era

A Friends of Toowong Cemetery Association Inc Guided Heritage Walk

IN INK IT WAS WRITTEN

Portrait of the young Arthur Hoey Davis, Joe of 'On Our Selection', courtesy National Library of Australia

© Friends of Toowong Cemetery Association Inc. Version 2, 5 August 2018

Compiled and presented by Lyn Maddock

HELEN & LEITH ADAMS	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	4	15	16/17

Helen and Leith Adams were the wife and infant son of the poet, commentator and radical Francis William Lauderdale Adams. In 1886, the family arrived in Brisbane where in June of that year their son, Leith was born. The following month Helen died of rheumatic fever and the after-effects of childbirth; In November the baby, Leith died also. As well as alluding to his wife's death and resting place in the 1888 story The Red Snake, Adams' poem Farewell the Children laments the life of a deceased infant.

THOMAS WELSBY	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	13	9	1

Thomas Welsby was born at Ipswich Queensland in 1858, the son of Hannah (nee Bilsborough) and William Welsby. He was a businessman, author, politician, sportsman, and historian. '[The] history of the State in which I was born,' he wrote, 'is almost sacred to me. Not so much that I am obsessed with it. I want to be reliable in that which I set down'. Thomas died at the age of 82 at his home Amity in New Farm on 3 February 1941. He was cremated and his ashes interred in the grave where his wife and baby son had been laid to rest many years earlier.

ALFRED MIDGLEY	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	13	67	22

Born in Yorkshire, Alfred Midgley was conspicuous for many years in the political, literary, religious, and industrial activities of the community in Queensland. He published two books of poems Helen Young and Other Verses and The Poems of Alfred Midgley. In 1982 his daughter, Zoe O'Leary published a book The little Byron : the life of Alfred Midgley. He died at the age of 82 years in 1930. The Alfred Midgley Postgraduate Scholarship support a postgraduate student engaged in research in the field of Australian literature at UQ.

CARL ADOLF FEILBERG	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	13	71	15

Danish-born Carl Feilberg commenced a career in journalism at the Wide Bay and Burnett News. He later worked at the Brisbane Courier as a political commentator and leader writer and was editor of The Queenslander from January 1879 to December 1880. He was a founding member and served several terms as President of the Johnsonian Club in Brisbane modelled on the famous Literary Club that Dr Samuel Johnson and Sir Joshua Reynolds founded in London in 1764.

DAVID HAROLD ROWBOTHAM	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	17	5	40

David Rowbotham was born in 1924 in Toowoomba where his father Harold was a shoemaker and his mother Phyllis a musician. He was a poet, writer, journalist and theatre critic. In 1955 he began a long career at the Courier Mail where he became the paper's inaugural arts editor and in 1980 was appointed literary editor and chief literary critic. David was admitted to the Order of Australia in the Queen's birthday honours in 1991 for his services to literature and journalism. He was nationally respected, much anthologised and was still writing up until his death in 2010 aged 86 years.

THOMAS BEATON HUTCHISON CHRISTIE	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	2	8	17

In 1869 the first book of verse ever to be published in Queensland was Poems and Songs by Thomas Beaton Hutchison Christie, who used the pseudonym 'Ralph Delaney'. In 1866 he opened a school on Gregory Terrace. With the advent of the State School system he was appointed head teacher at Kelvin Grove State School when it opened on 3 May 1875. He was teaching at Bundamba when he became ill and died in Brisbane Hospital in 1879.

GEORGE VOWLES	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	2	49	35

In 1870, the first book of verse by a Queensland born poet was published: Sunbeams in Queensland by the Ipswich born school teacher George Vowles. For many years George Vowles was one of the most highly accredited head teachers in the service of the Department of Public Instruction having attained the highest rank—that of teacher of class 1, division I. He served on the committee of the Brisbane School of Arts. He also claimed to be the first Queensland-born soldier to serve overseas for the Empire.

LEONTINE MARY JANE COOPER	Portion	Section	Grave Number
	2A	29	11

During the 1880s and 1890s Leontine Cooper was a prominent Brisbane literary figure, serving on the influential Brisbane School of Arts committee, and playing an active role within the Brisbane Literary Circle, where she mixed with a number of leading social and political figures within colonial society. In 1881 her short stories started appearing in the Boomerang newspaper – at first under the nom de plume L.C., and then in the Brisbane Courier and The Queenslander under the name 'Onyx', but by 1889 they were published under her full name.. As well as writing essays and novels she owned and edited Queensland's only women's suffrage newspaper, the Star between 1894 and 1895.